NEW FACULTY

Tulane University

Dear Colleagues and Friends,

The new university faculty members we celebrate in this publication join an institution that has provided more than 175 years of service to the community in which it subsists. Originally founded in 1834 as the Medical College of Louisiana, tasked to improve the public health of the New Orleans region, Tulane University has emerged today as a national and world leader in public service and social engagement. Our university is also recognized as a leader in scholarship, research and art-making. We are celebrated for being innovative, trend-setting, and student-centered. Our schools and our undergraduate college offer an impressively wide array of degrees in architecture, business, law, liberal arts, medicine, public health and tropical medicine, science and engineering and social work. Indeed, the university has demonstrated a profound commitment to a superior learning environment by fostering outstanding scholarship, research, and artistic accomplishment among its faculty. Tulane professors have been awarded the most prestigious honors in the academic world along with being elected to membership in the National Academies and in the American Academy for Arts and Sciences. Over the past four decades, Tulane colleagues have received 28 Fulbright Fellowships, 12 National Science Foundation CAREER Awards, 8 Guggenheim Foundation Fellowships, 9 National Endowment for the Humanities Fellowships, 3 Alfred P. Sloan Fellowships and 2 Nobel Prizes in Medicine.

Tulane now resolutely connects its values and mission to the needs of the city of New Orleans, the state of Louisiana and the Gulf Coast region. As a consequence, the profile and impact of the research, scholarship and artistic endeavors in which our faculty and students engage are being transformed. More and more Tulane faculty and staff members focus their expertise on the pursuit of a wide array of public service efforts (citywide, regionwide, nationwide, and worldwide). At the same time, our students gain practical experience, putting their rapidly maturing skills to use. We are very proud that our students thus have a truly unique educational experience. And we know that our outstanding teaching and mentorship, and the striking diversity in the degree programs we offer, help attract to Tulane the very best faculty and students from across our nation and from around the world. In the final analysis, it is the faculty and staff who make Tulane the truly extraordinary place that it is. It is their excellence and skill that inspires our students and that will always enlighten, sustain, strengthen and improve the wider communities we serve. Please join me in welcoming our new faculty colleagues and in wishing them every success in all their endeavors.

With all best wishes,

A handwritten signature in black ink that reads "Michael". The signature is fluid and cursive, with a large, prominent 'M'.

MICHAEL A. BERNSTEIN

Professor of History and Economics

Senior Vice President for Academic Affairs and Provost

Provost's Office leaders include, from left, Michael Cunningham (psychology), associate provost, engaged learning and teaching; Ana Lopez (communication), associate provost, faculty affairs; and Brian Mitchell (chemical and biomolecular engineering), associate provost, graduate studies and research.

YIGIT AKIN, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor, History
School of Liberal Arts*

Yigit Akin, who specializes in the history of the modern Middle East and the Islamic world, received his doctorate in history from the Ohio State University in 2011. His dissertation examined the social and cultural dimensions of Ottoman society's catastrophic experience of the First World War and analyzed the impact of the war on the empire's civilian population. His research interests include the social and cultural history of the late Ottoman Empire and early Republican Turkey with a focus on war and society, gender, nationalism, and social movements. His research has been published in journals such as International Journal of Middle East Studies and International Review of Social History. He was the recipient of the Distinguished Young Social Scientist Award from the Turkish Social Science Association for his first book, Robust and Vigorous Children: Physical Education and Sports in Early Republican Turkey. Before joining Tulane faculty, he was an assistant professor at the College of Charleston.

JULIE ALBERT, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor,
Chemical and Biomolecular Engineering
School of Science and Engineering*

Julie N.L. Albert received her B.S. degree in chemical engineering from the University of Florida in 2005 and her Ph.D. in chemical engineering from the University of Delaware in 2011. Subsequently, she pursued postdoctoral research studies at North Carolina State University. Her research has focused on developing gradient methods for exploring the effects of surface interactions on block copolymer thin film self-assembly and on tailoring the chemical and mechanical properties of silicone elastomer networks for cell mobility studies and peptide assembly. Currently, her primary research centers on the use of combinatorial methods to engineer nano- and micro-structured polymeric materials for cancer research, alternative energy, and other applications involving biological systems.

MEAD ALLISON, Ph.D.

*Professor, Earth and Environmental Sciences
School of Science and Engineering*

Mead Allison received his Ph.D. in coastal oceanography from State University of New York (Stony Brook) in 1993. A former EES faculty member, he returns after serving as associate director of the Institute for Geophysics at University of Texas at Austin. He will continue his work as a program director at the Water Institute for the Gulf in Baton Rouge, a point organization for conducting science in coastal restoration in Louisiana. His areas of expertise are coastal geology, river hydrodynamics, and sediment dynamics.

AARON ARMELIE, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor of Clinical Psychiatry
School of Medicine*

Aaron Armelie, who completed a pre-doctoral internship in clinical psychology through the Department of Psychiatry at Louisiana State University Health Sciences Center and post-doctoral training at Southeast Louisiana Veterans Health Care System, received his Ph.D. in clinical psychology from Kent State University. He helps train and supervise psychology interns and psychiatry residents in the Department of Psychiatry and Behavioral Sciences while also providing services as a licensed clinical psychologist through Tulane's Counseling and Psychological Services Center. His professional and research interests include traumatic stress, acceptance- and mindfulness-based interventions, and psychosocial contributors to health.

JACOB AUSDERAN, Ph.D.

*Visiting Assistant Professor, Political Science
School of Liberal Arts*

ADAM BENJAMIN, M.F.A.

*Professor of Practice, Music
School of Liberal Arts*

Adam Benjamin is a critically acclaimed pianist, keyboardist, composer and writer based in New Orleans whose sound crosses challenges traditional notions of jazz. Recognized as a “Rising Star in Jazz” in DownBeat magazine’s polls for six years running, he is a founding member of Kneebody, a Grammy-nominated electric quintet. He has recorded with Dave Douglas’ electric band Keystone, worked with filmmaker Bill Morrison, and performed with groups and artists as varied as the Jimmy Chamberlin Complex, So Percussion, Joshua Redman, and Beck. He has contributed to film scores, including the score to John Krasinski’s 2009 adaptation of David Foster Wallace’s Brief Interviews With Hideous Men and has performed at such venues as Carnegie Hall, the Hollywood Bowl, and North Sea Jazz Festival, and been a guest lecturer and faculty member at Stanford University, the Banff International Jazz Workshop, CalArts, the University of Southern California, and the School for Improvisational Music. His areas of expertise are modern jazz and jazz education.

ADAM BENNETT, Ph.D.

*Research Assistant Professor,
Global Health Systems and Development
School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine*

Adam Bennett received his doctorate from the Tulane School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine in 2012. His current research focuses on modeling spatial and climate factors for evaluations of vector-borne disease control interventions.

MICHAEL BRUMBAUGH, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor, Classical Studies
School of Liberal Arts*

Michael Brumbaugh earned his undergraduate degree from Colgate University in 2004 and completed his doctoral studies at UCLA in 2011. His research explores a variety of topics in classical literature and its reception in early modern Europe and the Americas. His current projects include the study of kingship ideology in the poetry of Greek Egypt and the reception of Plato’s political writings in Paraguay. A native of the Pacific Northwest, he joins the Department of Classical Studies following visiting positions at Princeton University and Reed College. His areas of expertise are ancient Greek literature and Latin literature.

REBECCA BRYANT, Ph.D.

*Visiting Assistant Professor, Management
A. B. Freeman School of Business*

CATHERINE BURNETTE, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor
School of Social Work*

Catherine Burnette received her doctorate in social work from the University of Iowa in 2013. Her practice and research interests include mental health, family violence, diversity, and resilience. Her research focus is on ameliorating violence against indigenous women in the United States, particularly those in the Southeast. She integrates critical theory with an examination of their historical oppression and its relationship with their disproportionate experience of violence and mental health disparities. Her research encompasses individual, family, and community resilience.

IRENE CAILLOUET, M.D.

*Instructor, Surgery
School of Medicine*

CHRISTOPHER CALOTT, M.ARCH.

*Professor of Practice and Director,
Master of Sustainable Real Estate Development Program
School of Architecture*

Christopher Calott received his B.A. degree from Brown University and Master of Architecture degree from Princeton University. A practicing architect, urban designer, and real estate developer, he most recently worked in Albuquerque, N.M., and taught at the University of New Mexico. His areas of expertise are architecture, urban design, real estate development, community development and planning, social entrepreneurship, and urban infrastructures.

Tonette Krousel-Wood is the associate provost for the health sciences and senior associate dean for faculty affairs in the School of Medicine.

Professor Arachu Castro (public health in Latin America) speaks during her endowed chair investiture.

ARACHU CASTRO, M.P.H., Ph.D.

Samuel Z. Stone Chair of Public Health in Latin America, Global Health Systems and Development School of Public Health & Tropical Medicine and the Stone Center for Latin American Studies

Prior to accepting the Samuel Z. Stone Chair of Public Health in Latin America, Arachu Castro was associate professor in the Department of Global Health and Social Medicine at Harvard Medical School, senior advisor for Mexico and Guatemala at Partners In Health, and medical anthropologist in the Division of Global Health Equity at Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston. Her major research interests explore how social inequalities engender differential risk for pathologies among the poor and how health policies alter the course of epidemic disease and other pathologies for those living in poverty. As a medical anthropologist trained in public health, she has worked in Mexico, Argentina, Haiti, Cuba, Puerto Rico, Venezuela, Colombia, Peru, the Dominican Republic, and Nicaragua. Among her awards are the 2005 Rudolf Virchow Award of the Society for Medical Anthropology and the 2010 Guggenheim Fellowship for work on women and AIDS in Latin America and the Caribbean. In 2012, she was named a Fellow of the Society for Applied Anthropology. Her areas of expertise are infectious disease and women's health in Latin America and the Caribbean.

JOHN CLARKE, Ph.D.

Professor of Practice, Management A. B. Freeman School of Business

TONYA COLPITTS, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor, Tropical Medicine School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine

Tonya M. Colpitts earned her doctorate in microbiology and immunology from the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston in 2007, where she focused on alphavirus entry mechanisms in the mosquito. She did her postdoctoral work at Yale University Medical School, primarily researching flavivirus pathogenesis in mosquitoes with focus on the interactions between flaviviruses and host cell proteins and pathways in both mosquito and mammalian models of infection. Her research also examines the impact of flavivirus infection on the host cell environment. Her areas of expertise are West Nile virus, dengue virus, and flaviviruses.

LISA CRAFT, M.S.N., C.S., A.P.R.N.

Instructor of Clinical Medicine, Internal Medicine School of Medicine

Lisa Craft, a family nurse practitioner, completed her graduate training at Louisiana State University and postgraduate training at the University of Southern Mississippi. Her areas of expertise are general internal medicine, occupational medicine, and women's health.

GEOFFREY DANCY, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor, Political Science School of Liberal Arts

ELENA DANIELE, Ph.D. CANDIDATE

Visiting Assistant Professor, French and Italian School of Liberal Arts

EDWARD DULANEY, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor, Music School of Liberal Arts

AARON DUMONT, M.D.

Professor and Chair, Neurosurgery School of Medicine

MATTHEW ESCARRA, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor, Physics and Engineering Physics School of Science and Engineering

After undergraduate studies at Rice University, Matthew Escarra received his Ph.D. in electrical engineering and a certificate in science, technology, and environmental policy from Princeton University in 2011. He completed further postdoctoral training and developed new approaches to high-efficiency solar energy conversion at the California Institute of Technology. His research interests include photonic materials, optoelectronic devices, nano-structured optical materials, and solar energy. His areas of expertise are laser-based technologies (including those for environmental, industrial, and medical sensing and defense applications); solar energy and photovoltaics; optics and photonics; and environmental, economic, and policy concerns associated with renewable energy technology.

C. EDWARD “TED” FEE, Ph.D.

Visiting Professor, Finance

A. B. Freeman School of Business

C. Edward Fee earned his Ph.D. in finance from the University of Florida in 1999 after receiving an MBA from Tulane in 1990. He is on leave from Michigan State University where he holds the title of Philip J. May Endowed Professor of Finance. Among the academic journals where he has published articles are the Journal of Finance, the Journal of Financial Economics, The Review of Financial Studies, the Journal of Accounting & Economics, The Accounting Review, and the Journal of Accounting Research. His main area of research is empirical corporate finance. He has written studies in areas including mergers and acquisitions, leveraged buyouts, management turnover, professional football coaching careers, and motion picture financing arrangements.

REGARDT FERREIRA, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor

School of Social Work

Regardt Ferreira, a native of South Africa, received a Ph.D. in social work from the University of Louisville after earning a BSW and a master's degree in disaster management (cum laude) from the University of the Free State, Bloemfontein, South Africa. He has worked on a number of international research projects related to disaster risk reduction in Africa, Europe, and the United States. His research interests include disaster resilience and vulnerability, special needs populations, and evidence based practice research. At the University of Louisville, he served as an adjunct faculty member at the Raymond A. Kent School of Social Work and was a graduate research assistant at the Center for Hazards Research and Policy Development.

MILES FRIEDLANDER, M.D.

Professor of Clinical Ophthalmology

School of Medicine

Professor Gabriel Navar (physiology), received the inaugural Oliver Fund Award for Excellence in Faculty Mentoring at Tulane.

DANTE GALLIANO, M.D.

Assistant Professor of Clinical Anesthesiology

School of Medicine

WINSTON GARRIS, M.D.

Instructor of Clinical Ophthalmology

School of Medicine

R. “BLAKE” BLAKESLEE GILPIN, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor, History

School of Liberal Arts

R. Blakeslee Gilpin received his Ph.D. from Yale University in 2009 where his dissertation won the 2010 C. Vann Woodward Prize from the Southern Historical Association for the best dissertation in Southern history. Gilpin's first book, John Brown Still Lives!: America's Long Reckoning With Violence, Equality, and Change, was a finalist for the Gilder Lehrman Center's Frederick Douglass Book prize. With Rose Styron, he edited the correspondence of author William Styron and published Selected Letters of William Styron in December 2012. It was nominated for a Pulitzer, and he is currently writing a new biography of Styron. His work has appeared in The New York Review of Books, The Paris Review, Harper's Magazine, The Boston Globe, The American Scholar, and The Huffington Post. His research interests and teaching revolve around slavery and its legacies in history, literature, and art. He focuses on the rhetoric of equality and its intersections with race and violence in the culture and history of the United States from the slave rebellions of the 18th century to present struggles with the echoes of American slavery.

JOÃO FELIPE GONÇALVES, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor, Anthropology
School of Liberal Arts*

João Felipe Gonçalves received his Ph.D. in anthropology from the University of Chicago in 2012. A specialist of Latin America and the Caribbean, he is the author of Rui Barbosa: pondo as ideias no lugar (Rio de Janeiro, 2000), a book about Brazil's eminent politician, diplomat, writer, philosopher, and social thinker. His areas of expertise are Cuba, Brazil, and Miami.

JENNIFER GREENHECK, M.D.

*Instructor of Clinical Medicine
School of Medicine*

OLEKSANDR GROMENKO, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor, Mathematics
School of Science and Engineering*

Oleksandr Gromenko received his doctorate in statistics from Utah State University in May 2013. His research primarily focuses on advancing statistical methods for exploratory analysis and inference for correlated functional data as well as their application to the geosciences. Before pursuing career in statistics, he received a master's degree in particle physics from Taras Shevchenko National University of Kiev.

JONATHAN GUGEL, M.D.

*Assistant Professor of Clinical Medicine
School of Medicine*

JEFFREY HAN, M.D., Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor, Biochemistry
School of Medicine and Tulane Cancer Center*

Jeffrey Han received his M.D. and Ph.D. degrees from the Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine. He then started his own laboratory as a staff associate in the Department of Embryology at the Carnegie Institution of Washington, where he studies LINE retrotransposons, a class of mobile DNA currently active in humans. His laboratory does research on the molecular biology of LINE retrotransposons and the consequences of uncontrolled LINE mobility to human health and disease with the goal of identifying novel drugs that inhibit the process of retrotransposition. His areas of expertise are molecular biology and genetics.

R. LYNN HANNAN, Ph.D.

*Professor, Accounting
A. B. Freeman School of Business*

Lynn Hannan earned her Ph.D. from the University of Pittsburgh in 2000. She is a CPA with 13 years of professional experience in government and industry. Her research on how organizations can improve outcomes via the design of their accounting information and incentive systems has earned awards, including the Notable Contribution to Accounting Literature Award and the McLaughlin Prize for Research in Accounting Ethics. Prior to Tulane, she was a professor and director of the accounting Ph.D. program at Georgia State University.

CATHERINE HARDEE, J.D.

*Instructor in Legal Writing and Forrester Fellow
School of Law*

After receiving her juris doctorate from New York University in 2004, Catherine Hardee clerked on the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals and worked in private practice, including practice in corporate litigation at Wachtell Lipton Rosen & Katz. Her teaching and research interests involve constitutional law and business associations.

DONALD HARRISON

*Visiting Lecturer, Music
School of Liberal Arts*

Donald Harrison is an innovative musician, composer, singer, and producer whose musical range encompasses jazz, R&B, hip-hop, and orchestral work. A native of New Orleans, he studied at Southern University and Berklee College of Music. He has performed with Roy Haynes, Jack McDuff, Art Blakey's Jazz Messengers, Terence Blanchard, Don Pullen, and his own Headhunters band. He helped create "Nouveau Swing" jazz that merges swing beat with popular dance styles. His Donald Harrison Electric Band has had hits on Billboard magazine's top 10. Spike Lee's featured him in the HBO documentary, When the Levees Broke, and he has appeared as himself in 11 episodes of HBO's Treme. Grammy-nominated trumpeter Christian Scott as well as Mark Whitfield, Cyrus Chestnut, Christian McBride, and The Notorious B.I.G. are among the young musicians he has nurtured. As he joins Tulane, he is also directing Tipitina's Intern Program and the New Jazz School at the Isidore Newman School. His areas of expertise are playing and teaching jazz, R&B, funk, soul, hip-hop, rock, blues, samba, salsa, all forms of New Orleans music, and classical music.

LAURA HEINS, Ph.D.

*Visiting Assistant Professor, Germanic and Slavic Studies
School of Liberal Arts*

Laura Heins received her Ph.D. in German studies from Yale University in 2005. Before coming to Tulane, she taught German and media studies at the University of Virginia and at Trinity College in Hartford, Connecticut. She is the author of Nazi Film Melodrama (University of Illinois Press, 2013) and has written articles on film history and media theory. Her areas of expertise are film and media studies.

MICHAEL HOERGER, Ph.D.

*Visiting Assistant Professor, Psychology
School of Science and Engineering*

Michael Hoerger completed an NIH National Research Service Award fellowship in healthcare decision-making at the University of Rochester Medical Center in 2013. He received his Ph.D. in clinical psychology from Central Michigan University in 2010 while completing an American Psychological Association accredited internship at URM. His research focuses on translational psychological science aimed at using basic psychological discoveries to improve public health. Much of his research focuses on how personality and emotion science can be applied to enhance decision-making in high-stakes contexts, such as helping patients with cancer and their families make healthcare decisions. Beyond research, he has participated actively in teaching and mentoring while providing clinical services to underserved members of the community and engaging with the community on issues related to work, education, and health. His areas of expertise are healthcare decision-making, health psychology, personality, emotion, psychology research methods, and statistics.

MEGAN HOLT, Ph.D.

*Postdoctoral Teaching Fellow, English
School of Liberal Arts*

KEHINDE ISHANGI, M.F.A.

*Visiting Assistant Professor, Theatre and Dance
School of Liberal Arts*

Kehinde Ishangi holds an M.F.A. in dance from Florida State University and a B.A. in dance pedagogy from Breneau University. A certified GYROTONIC®, GYROKINESIS®, and STOTT Pilates® Instructor, she is also a dancer, choreographer, and dance and movement scientist. She has danced as a featured soloist with Ballethnic Dance Company, Cleo Parker Robinson Dance Ensemble, Compagnie James Carls, and Compagnie Georges Momboye. As a dance scientist, she founded The Ishangi Institute for Dance and Movement Science to further her research to improve the integral health and longevity of dancers and athletes. At Florida State University she was an associate professor of dance science and assistant director of the Dance Summer in Paris program. She has served as movement coach and conditioning specialist for Urban Bush Women under the direction of Jawole Zollar and Germaine Acogny's Jant-Bi of Sengal, West Africa. For two years she was a member of the faculty of L'Académie Américaine de Danse de Paris. Currently, she is a member of Toni Weiss, senior professor of practice, is classroom engagement/teaching fellow in the Center for Teaching and Learning.

James MacLaren, is professor of physics and dean of Newcomb-Tulane College.

Faculty newcomers interact at Faculty Orientation.

2B Tribe Dance Theatre in New Orleans, performs as a solo artist, and choreographs commissioned works. Her areas of expertise are dance performance, dance education, and dance science.

CANDACE JENS, Ph.D.

Visiting Assistant Professor, Finance

A. B. Freeman School of Business

Candace Jens received her Ph.D. in finance from the University of Rochester in 2013. Her research interests include corporate finance, politics and finance, and equity issuance.

OSMAN KAZAN, Ph.D. CANDIDATE

Visiting Assistant Professor, Management

A. B. Freeman School of Business

Osman Kazan joins the Freeman School of Business from The University of Texas at Dallas, where he is expected to receive his Ph.D. in management science in 2013. Previously, he received an M.S. degree in operations research from The State University of New York at Buffalo. He has worked as a senior management consultant for U.S. technology companies such as Sabre GDS and Hewlett Packard. Currently his research focuses on energy management, retail electricity pricing, and healthcare operations. His areas of expertise are electricity pricing, smart meters, and smart grid.

WESTON LAMBERT, M.F.A.

Professor of Practice, Art

School of Liberal Arts

Weston Lambert graduated from Tulane University with an M.F.A. in 2012. After graduating, he taught as an adjunct lecturer at Tulane for a year, and then became the glass department's professor of practice. Along with teaching, he exhibits his sculptures in galleries nationally and internationally. His areas of expertise are art, glass, and sculpture.

BELINDA LEE, M.D.

Assistant Professor of Clinical Medicine

School of Medicine

Dr. Belinda Lee received her M.D. from Mount Sinai School of Medicine. She trained in internal medicine at Columbia University College of Physicians & Surgeons, and completed the joint fellowship program in nephrology at Brigham and Women's Hospital and Massachusetts General Hospital, and completed a Charles Bernard Carpenter Transplant Fellowship at Brigham and Women's Hospital. She is board certified in internal medicine and nephrology and is a UNOS certified transplant nephrologist. Her research interests include health disparities in the African American kidney transplant population, impact of APOL1 gene variants in the African American transplant population, transplantation in highly sensitized individuals, and BK virus infection post-transplant. Her areas of expertise are nephrology and transplant nephrology.

BRIAN LINDSETH, Ph.D.

Visiting Assistant Professor, Sociology

School of Liberal Arts

Brian Lindseth received his Ph.D. in 2013 from the University of California–San Diego, where he specialized in environmental sociology, the sociology of science and technology, and the built environment. He has a background in clean technology and low cost solar energy in addition to being an experienced database programmer and operations analyst. His areas of expertise are the environment, science, and technology.

HENRY LIU, M.D.

Associate Professor of Clinical Anesthesiology

School of Medicine

Henry Liu earned his M.D. degree in 1983 from Tongji Medical College, China, and did graduate study in surgery at the college's Union Hospital before joining the faculty as an attending surgeon. In 1990, he became a research scientist at the University of Pennsylvania Medical Center before training in surgery at the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons and moving to the University of Maryland for a residency in anesthesiology. Once his residency was completed, he went to the University of Utah Medical Center as an assistant professor of anesthesiology. He started private practice at West Jefferson Medical Center in 2001 after completing cardiothoracic anesthesiology/transesophageal echocardiography (TEE) fellowship training at Emory University Hospital in Atlanta. In 2009 he joined Tulane as the director of cardiothoracic anesthesia, associate director of research, and associate professor of anesthesiology. He is now on the boards of a number of professional and civic organizations and serves as a promotional speaker for medical and pharmaceutical groups. Academically, he has placed more than 30 articles in professional journals and written numerous scientific abstracts and book chapters. His areas of expertise are cardiothoracic and vascular anesthesiology, transesophageal echocardiography, and international relations.

ALISON LOVELL, Ph.D.

*Visiting Assistant Professor, French and Italian
School of Liberal Arts*

HEATHER MACHADO, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor, Biochemistry
School of Medicine and Tulane Cancer Center*

Heather Machado received her Ph.D. in molecular and cellular biology from Tulane University School of Medicine in 2005, where she researched cytomegalovirus pathogenesis during early pregnancy. In 2013, she completed postdoctoral studies in the laboratory of Jeffrey M. Rosen at Baylor College of Medicine, which focused on understanding the role of normal and cancer stem cells in mammary gland development and in human breast cancer. She then joined the Tulane's Department of Biochemistry and Molecular Biology, the Center for Stem Cell Research and Regenerative Medicine, and the Tulane Cancer Center at the Louisiana Cancer Research Center. Her laboratory is exploring how inflammatory cells and cancer stem cells interact to regulate the switch from premalignant to invasive breast cancer. Her areas of expertise are mammary stem cells and breast cancer.

MICHAEL MADDOX, M.D.

*Instructor of Clinical Medicine, Urology
School of Medicine*

NOA MAROM, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor, Physics and Astronomy
School of Science and Engineering*

Noa Marom received her Ph.D. from the Weizmann Institute of Science in her home country of Israel in 2010. Her thesis, entitled "A First Principles Description of the Electronic Structure of Organic Semiconductors," won the Shimon Reich Memorial

Prize of Excellence. Before coming to Tulane, she pursued postdoctoral research at the Institute for Computational Engineering and Sciences (ICES) at the University of Texas–Austin. She is particularly interested in the electronic properties of the organic-inorganic interfaces found in organic and dye-sensitized solar cells and in van der Waals interactions in molecular crystals and other weakly bound systems. She intends to work toward computational design of materials, interfaces, and nanostructures. Her area of expertise is computational materials science.

PATRICK McCARTY, M.D.

*Assistant Professor of Clinical Anesthesiology
School of Medicine*

MICHAEL L. McCASKILL, Ph.D., M.P.H.

*Assistant Professor, Global Environmental Health Sciences
School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine*

Michael L. McCaskill received his Ph.D. in pharmacy and pharmaceuticals with an emphasis in toxicology from Florida

Michael Bernstein, professor of history and economics, is senior vice president for academic affairs and provost.

New faculty members learn about the Center for Public Service.

A&M University in 2009. After working for the Florida Department of Health, he was a postdoctoral fellow in pulmonary and critical care at the University of Nebraska Medical Center. In 2011, he became assistant professor of public health at the University of Nebraska Medical Center where he taught graduate courses and conducted research involving vitamin D dys-metabolism and chemo-prevention of pulmonary toxicology due to ethanol consumption and tobacco smoke inhalation. His research interests include xenobiotic-induced metabolic dysregulation, DNA damage, and environmental fate in addition to diet and behavior-based public health intervention. His areas of expertise are vitamin D metabolism, pulmonary antimicrobial peptides, and malondialdehyde mediated DNA damage of the pulmonary epithelium.

JENNIFER McCLEARY, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor
School of Social Work*

Jennifer McCleary received her Ph.D. in 2013 from University of Minnesota. Her research focuses on substance use in communities displaced by political conflict.

ANNE McCONVILLE, M.D.

*Assistant Professor of Clinical Anesthesiology
School of Medicine*

ALLISON McCOY, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor, Biostatistics and Bioinformatics
School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine*

Allison McCoy received her Ph.D. in biomedical informatics from Vanderbilt University in 2010. Before joining Tulane, she was an assistant professor at the University of Texas School of Biomedical Informatics at Houston. Her research interests include applied clinical informatics and patient safety with a specific focus on the development of automated methods to generate, evaluate, and improve point-of-care clinical decision support within electronic health records. Her areas of expertise are biomedical informatics, clinical informatics, clinical decision support, and electronic health records.

RICKY MEDEL, M.D.

*Assistant Professor of Clinical Neurosurgery
School of Medicine*

Ricky Medel received his M.D. from the University of Toledo then completed his neurosurgical residency at the University of Virginia. During this time he spent a year as senior registrar in Auckland, New Zealand, and also completed a fellowship in interventional neuroradiology at the University of Virginia. His areas of expertise are brain aneurysms, vascular malformations, carotid artery, vertebral artery and intracranial stenosis, Moyamoya disease, stroke, cerebral bypass surgery, endovascular neurosurgery, spine disorders, complex spinal conditions, brain tumors, skull base surgery, pediatric neurosurgery, peripheral nerve disorders, movement disorders and functional neurosurgery, epilepsy, stereotactic radiosurgery, neurotrauma and critical care.

CHARLES MIGNOT, Ph.D.

*Professor of Practice, French and Italian
School of Liberal Arts*

Charles Mignot received his Ph.D. in French linguistics from the University of Texas–Austin in 2013. His research interests include French grammar and syntax, cognitive linguistics, and foreign language pedagogy.

WARD MILLER, M.D.

*Instructor, Clinical Medicine
School of Medicine*

JEFFREY MOCK, Ph.D.

*Research Assistant Professor, Neuroscience, Psychology
School of Science and Engineering*

Jeffrey Mock received a B.S. in zoology from the University of Texas–Austin in 2000 and in 2007 earned a Ph.D. in neuroscience from Tulane, where he investigated neuroanatomical differences between children who stutter and those who do not. He then spent five years as a postdoctoral fellow in the Department of Neurology at Louisiana State University Health Sciences Center–New Orleans, where he investigated how speech preparation influences auditory cortical response and how those differ in adults who stutter and those who do not. His areas of expertise are developmental stuttering, sensorimotor integration, and neuroanatomy.

MALLORY MONACO CATERINE, Ph.D. CANDIDATE

*Lecturer, Classical Studies
School of Liberal Arts*

Mallory Monaco Caterine joins the Department of Classical Studies at Tulane after a year as an adjunct instructor of classics at the University of Virginia. She will receive her doctorate in classics in 2013 from Princeton University, where she wrote a dissertation on Plutarch's biographies of Greek statesmen after Alexander the Great. A specialist in Greek and Latin prose literature, particularly biography, history, and letter-writing, her research focuses on the interactions between literature, ethics, and politics in the early Roman Empire.

EDWARD MORRISON, M.D.

*Instructor, Clinical Medicine, Heart & Vascular Institute
School of Medicine*

TATSUYA MURAKAMI, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor, Anthropology
School of Liberal Arts*

Tatsuya Murakami received his Ph.D. from Arizona State University. His research focuses on the materiality of power relations among the social segments in Central Mexico as expressed in labor and material resources. He is especially concerned with developing a set of concepts and methodologies to discern the complex social landscapes of power using practice-based and multidisciplinary approaches, including the application of archaeometric methods. He has conducted construction experiments, performed materials analysis for lime plaster and cut stone blocks, and made an analysis of lapidary objects (especially greenstone) at Teotihuacan. He is currently directing an archaeological project at the formative site of Tlalancaleca, Puebla, Mexico, which is investigating the sociopolitical dynamics in a pre-state society and the broader regional processes leading to state formation at Teotihuacan. His areas of expertise are complex societies, Mesoamerican archaeology, archaeometry, and material culture.

ISA MURDOCK-HINRICHS, Ph.D.

*Postdoctoral Teaching Fellow, English
School of Liberal Arts*

Isa Murdock-Hinrichs received her Ph.D. from the University of California–San Diego in 2010 and will join Tulane's English Department in the fall of 2013. She previously taught composition and film at UCSD.

MYO THWIN MYINT, M.D.

*Assistant Professor of Clinical Psychiatry
School of Medicine and Counseling and Psychological Services, Division of Student Affairs*

Myo Thwin Myint received his M.D. from Virginia Commonwealth University School of Medicine, Medical College of Virginia Campus. He recently completed the triple board residency training in pediatrics/psychiatry/child and adolescent psychiatry here at Tulane University School of Medicine.

CORY ELIZABETH NELSON, Ph.D.

*Postdoctoral Teaching Fellow, English
School of Liberal Arts*

Cory Elizabeth Nelson recently completed her doctorate in English and American literature at Brandeis University. Her research interests include contemporary American fiction, modern European and American theater, and pedagogy.

Tulane University welcomed more than 100 new faculty to its campuses this fall.

ROBERTO NICOSIA, Ph.D.

*Visiting Assistant Professor, Italian Studies
School of Liberal Arts*

Roberto Nicosia earned Ph.D. degrees from Rutgers University and the University of Messina, Italy, and a B.A. degree from University of Rome. His areas of expertise are Italian studies, the Renaissance, and classical studies.

APOLLO NKWAKE, Ph.D.

*Research Associate Professor,
School of Social Work and the Disaster Resilience and Leadership Academy*

Apollo Nkwake holds a Ph.D. in social development from the University of Cape Town, South Africa. He joins Tulane after more than 12 years of experience in development program monitoring and evaluation (M&E). He has held senior M&E adviser positions at World Vision United States, University Research Co, LLC, and JSI Research and Training Institute. He has extensive field experience with USAID, World Bank, UNICEF, and World Vision programs in Africa, Asia, and Latin America. He is an active member of the American Evaluation Association and the International Development Evaluation Association and is the author of two books and peer-reviewed journal articles and book chapters on international development and program evaluation.

VIRGINIA OLIVEROS, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor, Political Science
School of Liberal Arts*

Virginia Oliveros, who holds a B.A. degree from the Universidad de Buenos Aires in Argentina, received her Ph.D. in Political Science from Columbia University in May 2013. Before coming to Tulane, she was a visiting scholar in the Research Department at the Inter-American Development Bank. She now studies the political economy of developing countries with a regional focus on Latin America. Her research interests include comparative political institutions, elections, clientelism, and patronage politics.

AMY PARZIALE, Ph.D.

*Visiting Assistant Professor, English
School of Liberal Arts*

Amy Parziale completed her Ph.D. at the University of Arizona with a dissertation on the representation of trauma in contemporary American literature and film. Her research and teaching specialties include American literature, film, gender studies, trauma studies, cultural studies, and popular culture.

JESSICA PEARSON-PATEL, Ph.D.

*Mellon Postdoctoral Teaching Fellow, History
School of Liberal Arts*

Jessica Pearson-Patel earned her doctorate in history and French studies at New York University in May 2013. Her research focuses on the role of the United Nations in shaping France's approach to postwar cooperation in public health in French sub-Saharan Africa after the Second World War. She has undertaken research in Senegal, France, New York, and Washington, D.C. and this summer was a participant in the National History Center's Eighth International Seminar on Decolonization. She will also be participating in an international colloquium on the history of international health organizations in Shanghai this fall.

MENAKA PHILIPS, Ph.D. CANDIDATE

*Professor of Practice, Political Science and Gender and Sexuality Studies Program
School of Liberal Arts*

Menaka Philips joins the Tulane faculty this year, having received her Ph.D. in political theory from Northwestern University.

GAYLE PLETSCH, M.D.

*Assistant Professor of Clinical Psychiatry
School of Medicine*

Gayle Pletsch received her M.D. and completed her residency in clinical psychiatry at the Tulane University School of Medicine. Before joining Tulane's faculty she was the assistant training director, assistant professor of psychiatry, and staff physician at Southeast Louisiana Veterans Health Care System.

PHILIP PUTNAM, M.D.

*Assistant Professor of Clinical Medicine
School of Medicine*

JENNIFER RICHARD, Ph.D. CANDIDATE

*Lecturer, Political Science
School of Liberal Arts*

Jennifer received an M.A. in religious studies from the Hebrew University of Jerusalem in 2008 and is currently finishing her Ph.D. in political theory at Louisiana State University with plans to graduate in May 2014.

EMILY ROSENZWEIG, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor, Marketing

A. B. Freeman School of Business

Emily Rosenzweig, with a B.A. degree in public policy from Princeton University, began a career in educational research and program evaluation in 1999, running her own consulting business before returning to graduate school. She earned her Ph.D. in social psychology from Cornell University in 2013. Her research focuses on judgment and decision making surrounding consumer purchases. She wrote her dissertation on the predictors of purchase-regret, and it has been published in the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology. Her areas of expertise are consumer behavior and choice, judgment, and decision making.

STEPHEN ROWE, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor, Accounting

A. B. Freeman School of Business

Stephen Rowe completed his Ph.D. in accountancy at the University of Illinois at Urbana-Champaign 2013. His research, using both experimental and archival methods, focuses on how individual behavior and financial reporting influence auditor and investor judgment under conditions of uncertainty. He now teaches auditing, an introduction to assurance, and the structure and procedures for a financial statement audit, but has also taught introductory financial accounting and other topics related to business professionals and auditing. With nine years experience in industry, he continues to maintain an active CPA license and most recently managed audits of banking and financial services companies for KPMG. He has received awards for teaching and professional activities. His areas of expertise are financial statement auditing and banking.

PATRICIA SCARAFFIA, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor, Tropical Medicine

School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine

Patricia Scaraffia has expertise in nitrogen and carbon metabolism in Aedes aegypti mosquitoes, the main vector of dengue and yellow fever viruses. Her laboratory is currently using traditional and cutting-edge approaches, including RNA interference, isotopically-labeled compounds, and mass spectrometry to learn how the A. aegypti females' powerful biochemical-physiological mechanisms cope with the toxic ammonia concentrations generated during blood meal digestion. This critical detoxification process allows the female mosquitoes to maintain ammonia levels below lethal concentration in their tissues. Her laboratory is interested in unraveling the physiological, biochemical, and molecular bases underlying the regulation of nitrogen and carbon metabolism in mosquitoes, as well as in discovering new metabolic targets that can be used for the design of better mosquito-control strategies.

JOHN SCHENK, Ph.D.

Postdoctoral Teaching Fellow,

Ecology and Evolutionary Biology

School of Science and Engineering

John Schenk earned his doctorate in botany from Washington State University in 2009, where he specialized in the evolution and systematics of Mentzelia, a genus of desert-adapted plants common to western North America. His postdoctoral training at Florida State University focused on statistical phylogenetic approaches to study the adaptive radiation of muroid rodents. As a plant systematist, he is interested in how adaptation of morphological traits is driven by environmental variation and how this relationship shapes lineage diversification. His areas of expertise are botany, systematics, phylogenetics, and evolution.

REBECCA SCHROLL, M.D.

Assistant Professor of Clinical Surgery

School of Medicine

Rebecca Schroll received her M.D. from Saint Louis University and completed her internship and residency in general surgery at Wake Forest University in Winston-Salem, N.C. Following her residency, she did fellowship training in trauma and critical care at Louisiana State University–New Orleans. After finishing her fellowship, she became a full-time member of the Tulane faculty and is board certified in general surgery and board eligible in surgical critical care. She is on staff at both Tulane University Medical Center and the Interim Louisiana Medical Center, where her clinical interests include trauma, critical care, emergency general surgery, and elective general surgery. In addition, she is the medical director of the Surgical Intensive Care Unit at Tulane University Medical Center.

BRYAN SEELY, M.D.

Instructor, Clinical Medicine, Orthopedics

School of Medicine

CRISTIAN SEPULVEDA, Ph.D.

Postdoctoral Teaching Fellow, Economics

School of Liberal Arts

Cristian Sepulveda earned his Ph.D. in economics from Georgia State University in 2010. His main areas of research are public economics, applied microeconomics, and fiscal federalism. He is currently focused on the analysis of tax distortions, normative and positive models of public expenditures, and the assignment of revenue sources in fiscally decentralized countries. In recent years, he worked at the International Center for Public Policy at GSU, where he coauthored several policy reports on fiscal decentralization and intergovernmental transfers for the governments of Romania, Nicaragua, and Peru.

JONATHAN SILBERSTEIN, M.D.

Assistant Professor of Urology,

Section Chief Urologic Oncology

School of Medicine

Jonathan Silberstein completed his M.D. at SUNY Upstate Medical University in 2004. Following this he completed a residency in urologic surgery at the University of California–San Diego. Most recently he completed his fellowship in urologic oncology at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York. His area of expertise is urologic oncology: cancer of the prostate, bladder, kidney, and testis.

JONATHAN SIMON, Ph.D.

Mellon Postdoctoral Teaching Fellow, Philosophy

School of Liberal Arts

JAMES STACKHOUSE, M.D.

Instructor of Clinical Ophthalmology

School of Medicine

ROBERTO STEIN, Ph.D.

Visiting Assistant Professor, Finance

A. B. Freeman School of Business

Before receiving his Ph.D. in finance from Tulane in 2012, Roberto Stein served in a number of positions in industries ranging from natural gas engineering, to logistics, tourism, and financial services. Currently a member of the faculty of economics and business at the Universidad de Chile, his research interests include mutual fund management and investor decision-making analysis, behavioral finance, and novel statistics and econometric methodologies, including simulation and numerical methods. His area of expertise is stock market, mutual fund, and general financial strategy.

KERRY STERLING, M.D.

Instructor, Family and Community Medicine

School of Medicine

CHARLES STOECKER, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor, Global Health Systems

and Development

School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine

Charles Stoecker is a health economist interested in designing and analyzing policies that affect early life events. He has done modeling work for an early version of the Affordable Care Act and recently completed a fellowship at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. His work has explored the impacts of vaccination policy efficiency, air pollution regulation, and health insurance coverage on children's health. His current research focuses on the economics of infectious disease including the impact of the Super Bowl on disease transmission and the links between scope of practice laws and health inequality.

MEGAN SULLIVAN, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor, Art

School of Liberal Arts

Megan Sullivan received her Ph.D. in art history with a specialty in modern and contemporary Latin American art from Harvard University. Her research focuses on abstract and conceptual art as well as on artistic exchanges between Latin America, Europe, and the United States throughout the 20th century.

RACHANA SUS, M.D.

Assistant Professor of Clinical Medicine

School of Medicine

MICHAEL TAHIR, M.D.

Assistant Professor of Clinical Anesthesiology

School of Medicine

EDWIGE TAMALET TALBAYEV, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor, French and Italian

School of Liberal Arts

Edwige Tamalet Talbayev specializes in Maghrebi literature and Mediterranean studies. She earned an Agrégation in English in France and a Ph.D. in literature from the University of California–San Diego. Her work focuses on the intersection of modernity, colonialism, and transnationalism in the Maghreb. Her current research examines Mediterranean echoes in francophone Maghrebi literature. Prior to joining Tulane, she was assistant professor of French at Yale University and an affiliate of the Council on Middle Eastern Studies and the Council on African Studies at the MacMillan Center at Yale. Her areas of expertise are North Africa, francophone literature, Mediterranean studies, and postcolonial theory.

ANGELA VUOTTO, M.D.

Assistant Professor of Clinical Psychiatry

School of Medicine

JONATHAN WEED, M.D.

Assistant Professor of Clinical Anesthesiology

School of Medicine

Professor Shanshan Du (anthropology), left, congratulates new Ph.D. recipient, Melissa Beske.

Don Gaver, professor and chair of biomedical engineering, has won a major NSF award for “IGERT: Bioinnovation Through the Development of Novel Biological Delivery.”

MARK WILSON, Ph.D.

*Research Assistant Professor,
Global Environmental Health Sciences
School of Public Health & Tropical Medicine*

Mark Wilson completed his doctorate in toxicology at Tulane University in 2010. His dissertation focused on using chemical analysis and in-vitro bioassays to identify genotoxic chemicals in wood dusts. He is currently working on in-vivo mutation assays to study the effects of diet on chemical sensitivity and is involved in health risk assessments related to seafood consumption.

T. COOPER WOODS, Ph.D.

*Research Assistant Professor,
Physiology and Heart & Vascular Institute
School of Medicine*

T. Cooper Woods received his Ph.D. in biophysical sciences from the University of Alabama at Birmingham in 1998. He completed two postdoctoral fellowships, one in vascular biology at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the other at Columbia University Medical Center. His research focuses on the interplay of diabetes and cardiovascular disease. His areas of expertise are vascular biology and vascular complications of diabetes.

Michal Jazwinski, professor of medicine and director of the Center on Aging, received a multi-year NIH award for “Mentoring Research Excellence in Aging and Regenerative Medicine.”

ZHUORU WU, Ph.D.

*Assistant Professor, Cell and Molecular Biology
School of Science and Engineering*

Zhuoru Wu received her Ph.D. from the University of Texas–Austin in 2001. In 2003 she started postdoctoral training in Dr. David Garbers’s laboratory at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas, where she continued as an instructor from 2010 to 2013.

YEESHEEN YANG, Ph.D.

*Mellon Postdoctoral Teaching Fellow, Communication
School of Liberal Arts*

Yeesheen Yang’s research interests include film, bioethics, and the medical humanities. Her current book project on the cultural narratives of organ transplant models a multi-disciplinary approach that is continually invested in questions about what it means to be human in the age of bio-technology and how the humanistic disciplines help to define and illuminate this figure. Before her work in cultural studies, she was a research scientist at the Salk Institute for Biological Studies. Her areas of expertise are the gap and intersections between science and the humanities, transplant narratives, 19th century conceptions of blood, changing ideas about the body, and cultural studies in general.

MICHAEL YARBOROUGH, M.D.

*Assistant Professor of Clinical Anesthesiology,
Anesthesiology
School of Medicine*

Christopher Dunn, associate professor of Spanish and Portuguese, is the recipient of a National Endowment for the Humanities Fellowship for research on the Brazilian “Contracultura.”

NINA YIN, Ph.D.

Postdoctoral Teaching Fellow, Economics School of Liberal Arts and Murphy Institute

Nina Yin received her Ph.D. from Toulouse School of Economics, France, in September 2013. She specializes in health economics, empirical industrial organization and the economics of innovation and intellectual property. Her current research studies the pros and cons of market exclusivity granted to pharmaceutical innovation.

KHOKHER ZEIGHAM, Ph.D.

Visiting Assistant Professor, Finance A. B. Freeman School of Business

LIHUA ZHANG, M.D.

Assistant Professor of Clinical Anesthesiology School of Medicine

QI ZHAO, Ph.D.

Research Assistant Professor, Epidemiology School of Public Health and Tropical Medicine

Qi Zhao completed medical training for her B.Med. degree (equivalent to a U.S. M.D. degree) at Peking University Health Science Center and earned her Ph.D. in epidemiology at Peking Union Medical College. Her research interests focus on genetic and environmental risk factors and their interactions in the development of cardiovascular disease. She has received American Heart Association research funding for investigating the gene-obesity interaction in the regulation of blood pressure. Her area of expertise is the genetics of blood pressure salt sensitivity.

YIHUA ZHAO, Ph.D.

Visiting Assistant Professor, Finance A. B. Freeman School of Business

Yihua Zhao earned his Ph.D. in finance from the Naveen Jindal School of Management at the University of Texas–Dallas in 2003. His research and teaching have focused on investment management and asset pricing.

KAREN ZUMHAGEN-YEKPLe, Ph.D.

Assistant Professor, English School of Liberal Arts

Karen Zumhagen-Yekple, since receiving her Ph.D. in comparative literature from the University of California–Berkeley, has been a college fellow in comparative literature at Harvard University (2011–2013) and a postdoctoral research fellow in the Mellon Fellowship of Scholars in the Humanities and the Department of English at Stanford University (2009–2011). She works in British, European, North American, and Latin American literature and film of the 20th and 21st centuries with a focus on modernism, its afterlife in global fiction, and the relationship between philosophy and literature. She is currently completing a book manuscript on the ethics of enigma in the high-modernist puzzle text and is co-editor of the volume, Wittgenstein and Modernism, under contract with University of Chicago Press.
